This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1906 edition. Excerpt: ... CHAPTER XII. THE STRANGE STORY OF JONATHAN SMALL. A very patient man was the inspector in the cab, for it was a weary time before I rejoined him. His face clouded over when I showed him the empty box. There goes the reward! said he, gloomily. Where there is no money there is no pay. This nights work would have been worth a tenner each to Sam Brown and me, if the treasure had been there. Mr. Thaddeus Sholto is a rich man, I said. He will see that you are rewarded, treasure or no treasure. The inspector shook his head despondently, however. Its a bad job, he repeated ; and so Mr. Athelney Jones will think. His forecast proved to be correct, for the detective looked blank enough when I got to Baker Street and showed him the empty box. They had only just arrived, Holmes, the prisoner, and he, for they had changed their plans so far as to report themselves at a station upon the way. My companion lounged in his armchair with his usual listless expression, while Small sat stolidly opposite to him with his wooden leg cocked over his sound one. As I exhibited the empty box he leaned back in his chair and laughed aloud. This is your doing, Small, said Athelney Jones, angrily. Yes, I have put it away where you shall never lay hand upon it, he cried, exultantly. It is my treasure; and if I cant have the loot Ill take darned good care that no one else does. I tell you that no living man has any right to it, unless it is three men who are in the Andaman convict-barracks and myself. I know now that I cannot have the use of it, and I know that they cannot. I have acted all through for them as much as for myself. Its been the sign of four with us always. Well I know that they would have had me do just what I have done, and throw the...
