

The prime minister

Book may have numerous typos, missing text, images, or index. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. 1893. Excerpt: ... CHAPTER III. MR. ABEL WHARTON, Q.C. Lopez was not a man to let grass grow under his feet when he had anything to do. When he was tired of walking backwards and forwards over the same bit of pavement, subject all the while to a cold east wind, he went home and thought of the same matter while he lay in bed. Even were he to get the girls assurances of love, without the fathers consent he might find himself farther from his object than ever. Mr. Wharton was a man of old fashions, who would think himself ill-used and his daughter ill-used, and who would think also that a general offence would have been committed against good social manners, if his daughter were to be asked for her hand without his previous consent. Should he absolutely refuse,--why then the battle, though it would be a desperate battle, might perhaps be fought with other strategy; but, giving to the matter his best consideration, Lopez thought it expedient to go at once to the father. In doing this he would have no silly tremors. Whatever he might feel in speaking to the girl, he had sufficient self-confidence to be able to ask the father, if not with assurance at any rate without trepidation. It was, he thought, probable that the father, at the first attack, would neither altogether accede, nor altogether refuse. The disposition of the man was averse to the probability of an absolute reply at the first moment. The lover imagined that it might be possible for him to take advantage of the period of doubt which would thus be created. Mr. Wharton was and had for a great many years been a barrister practising in the Equity Courts,-- or rather in one Equity Court, for throughout a lifes work now extending to nearly fifty years, he had hardly ever gone out of the single Vice-Chancellors Court which was much better known b...

Prime Minister is the current title of the head of government of Portugal. As head of government, the Prime Minister coordinates the actions of ministers,The Prime Minister of the Portuguese Republic is the head of the countrys Government. He/she coordinates the actions of all ministers, represents theThe Prime Minister of Hungary (Hungarian: miniszterelnok) is the head of government in Hungary. The Prime Minister and the Cabinet are collectivelyThe Prime Minister of Egypt is the head of the Egyptian government. Contents. [hide]. 1 History 2 Powers 3 Current Prime Minister 4 Living former PrimeThe Prime Minister is a novel by Anthony Trollope, first published in 1876. It is the fifth of the Palliser series of novels.The Prime Minister of Lithuania is the head of the Government of Lithuania. The prime minister is Lithuanias head of government and is appointed by theThe Prime Minister of Canada is the primary minister of the Crown, chairman of the Cabinet, and thus Canadas head of government, charged with advising theA prime minister is the head of a cabinet and the leader of the ministers in the executive branch of government, often in a parliamentary or semi-presidential system. In many systems, the prime minister selects and may dismiss other members of the cabinet, and allocates posts to members within the government.The Prime Minister is the head of government in Sweden. Before the creation of the office of a Prime Minister in 1876, Sweden did not have a head ofThe President of the Council of Ministers of the Italian Republic commonly referred to in Italy as Presidente del Consiglio, or informally as Premier and known inThe Prime Minister is the head of government of Japan. The Prime Minister is appointed by the Emperor of Japan after being designated by the National DietThe Prime Minister of Denmark is the head of government in the Kingdom of Denmark. Before the creation of the modern office, Denmark did not initially have aThe Prime Minister of the Republic of Korea is appointed by the President of South Korea, with the National Assemblys approval. The officeholder is notThe Prime Minister of Spain, officially the President of the Government of Spain is the head of the government of Spain. The office was established in its currentThe Prime Minister of the Government of Romania is the head of the Government of Romania. Initially, the office was styled President of the Council of MinistersThe Prime Minister of the Republic of Fiji is the head of government of Fiji. The Prime Minister is appointed by the President under the terms of the 2013